The Basic email editor: HTML

From now on, you can upload a HTML email template. This will allow you to improve the overall look & feel of your emails. With HTML, your code is readable and easier to enhance.

In the following example, discover how beside CSS/JavaScript, you can use velocity syntax to get data for the email through exported DTO or STX helper directly and without adaptation.

> ⓘ There is no standard template for HTLM format. Please provide and upload your own custom HTLM email templates.
>
> Not all pre-defined macros, currently available for xdoc template, work for html template. Only the following list of supported macros support HTML format: #markAsSpecimen, #salutation, #orgAddress, #showAmount, #formatDate, #showAbsoluteAmount.

- New document model type HTML

- Upload HTML template

- Example output for order confirmation email

- HTML email template code example:

#* Mark your document as specimen on test environments such as preproduction *#
    #markAsSpecimen($document)
